Nandina domestica

Otherwise known as Heavenly Bamboo, Nandina domestica offers excellent seasonality. Nandina is relatively drought tolerant after establishment, but will benefit from occasional summer watering. All varieties share a symmetrical, rounded, fairly compact habit, rarely clumping over 4 feet wide, or growing over 4 feet high. New foliage comes out fresh green, and matures to brilliant red or burgundy in the fall and winter. Bright red berries occasionally adorn Nandina in the winter. Plant Nandina in areas of full sun, to dappled or afternoon shade (more sun equals more color).
